

Will it be white?

With the recent blusters of snow across the UK, the big debate is what are the chances of a white Christmas in 2024? According to the Met Office, it can only accurately forecast if snow is on the cards five days before. Technically, the last white Christmas was in 2023 in the UK with 11 percent of Met Office stations recording snow falling – allow none actually reported snow lying on the ground.

For a bit of fun, the website www.willigetawhitechristmas.com attempts to forecast whether your town will get snow at Christmas. According to the website, Harrogate has just a 25% chance of snow this year!

The perfect tree

The name BOSK, meaning ‘a small, wooded area’, reflects Norfolk Leisure’s commitment to delivering the natural beauty of the outdoors into homes during the festive season. Its premium trees are carefully and intricately designed to replicate natural colours, hues and textures. Crafted with high tip counts, realistic shapes, and dense branches, BOSK trees transform your space into an enchanting experience. BOSK trees are available in a wide range of shapes and sizes offering something for everyone with customisable lighting options to highlight every detail. Choose BOSK for a Christmas tree that will bring joy and wonder for years to come.

Home textiles

For Christmas 2025, esteemed North Yorkshire designers Walton & Co will be presenting new collections of textiles for the home. Here we explore one of them: Nordic Lodge.

Taking a moment to escape to a warm nature retreat, think: rich, deep faux fur throws and cushions; wool and jute rugs for a natural touch underfoot; table and kitchen textile ranges that feature forest foliage of Pine Cone designs on a sparkly white background, as though it’s freshly snowed... all grounded with new handcrafted table accessories.
